The reason for this, more often than not, the project is generally not as playable as planned and requires a certain amount of fixing. to make it work right.

There are dozens of reasons for DVDs not to work, here are just a couple of them.

1. It is a Power point presentation, requiring a computer to play it on.
If the presentation is not saved correctly. Let's say that maybe the computer is not Powerpoint capable. It may not play in someone elses computer.
(missing fonts, missing codecs etc., the pictures or music may not be accessed or attached correctly.)
2. It could be that it was burned on a CD and not a DVD.
It may be burned on a DVD+R (note the plus R) Plus R DVDs will not play on a DVD Player only capable of Playing DVD - R (Note the minus R) DVDs
3. Inexperience at making them or not having the correct settings when making a DVD.
4. We require projects to be in our hand 24 hours before the event, in order to help us make sure that your project will play.
5. There are a lot of little things that can hinder the playing of a DVD

I am not saying that it cannot be done correctly, but getting it right in two or three days is the biggest part of the problem.

My experience with more than 30 projects created by friends or family members, 15 of them did not make it out of their computer, the other 15 that did play, did so because of last minute reconfiguring or tweaking of the delivered project. Generally the project does not get delivered until moments before it is to be played or presented. We have equipment that can play just about anything, but... does the Facility that it will be played in, have the correct equipment?
